Lights out across the City

Horizon Utilities reports decrease in energy consumption during Earth Hour

(HAMILTON, ON) MARCH 27, 2011 – Horizon Utilities reports that electricity demand decreased 18 megawatts or 3.5% in Hamilton Saturday night between 8:30 and 9:30 p.m. as Hamiltonians powered down to celebrate Earth Hour. The drop, compared to the same hour from previous Saturdays in March with comparable weather, is the same as last year's 3.5% reduction.

"I am very pleased with our community's participation during Earth Hour," said Mayor Bob Bratina. "But now that the lights are back on, we want you to go beyond the hour and consider the simple changes you can make daily that will add up and create an impact. Let's work together to create a more sustainable future."

Many Earth Hour participants enjoyed an electronic-free night. Some families took advantage of the hour to take a walk through their neighbourhood or play board games by candlelight.

"Earth Hour is a great way to raise awareness about the everyday actions we can take to fight climate change," says Max Cananzi, President & CEO, Horizon Utilities Corporation. "We're pleased to collaborate with the City and its residents to demonstrate the substantial energy savings we can realize as we work together not only during Earth Hour, but on an on-going basis as we help build sustainable communities."

The goal of Earth Hour is to get as many individuals and businesses as possible to turn off their lights for one hour to raise awareness about climate change. One way to slow the current rate of global warming is to get individuals to make small adjustments to the amount of power they consume each and every day. Last night's reductions by Horizon's customers are equivalent to powering 794 homes for a 24-hour period.
